To all the members that have put so much effort to make it work, we are proud of you.

Be sure to stay near, so next year you can do this all over again. THANKS.
Looks like we had about 150 cars again, and all those infernal machines pumping water, making their strange noise.

We even had five volunteers for the Fashion Show.

The Flea Market was bigger, with more "stuff" offered.

Geary is doing better all the time, even stole the Show with a Best of Show trophy for his first showing of his Mercury.

I was amazed how fast the big tent went up, due to all the help, last year we were buried twice when it fell on us...

Bob will be out of town at next meeting (Girl graduating) he asked to explain the details of expenses and profit involved.

	EXPENSES	SALES	PROFITS
RAFFLE.....	411.04.....	1316.00.....	904.96
YARD SALE.....		176.75.....	176.75
AUCTION.....		175.00.....	175.00
AACA SALE.....	319.64.....	392.85.....	73.21

All the details of all transactions are listed on our financial report this a final report Bob did a fantastic job.

I wish I knew the names of all the members involved in making this show what it is, from the sandwich maker, to the chief judge, the clean up crew, the parking crew, the little guy who drew all the white lines. The crew I saw towing the out-houses, I wish I had a picture of that... that is where I really goofed, I snapped 36 times, with no film in my camera.....

I hope some one lends me a few pictures of the show for this newsletter.

LOST CAMERA.... a visitor left a 35 mm. camera on one of the table under the tent. Please get in touch with Geary if you know where it is.

Pierre.

Budget panel keeps club in the black

By Al Edmond

Vice President, Budget & Finance

To most of us, budget and finance means making every attempt to balance your expenditures with your income or at best, have a little surplus to set aside for the unexpected. We all realize the tremendous difficulties we encounter when we are not successful in this endeavor.

Pause for a minute and think of all the individual items of expense you encounter every day and multiply them by 365. Think of how difficult it would be to budget all of these items for the entire year so that the sum total would not exceed your income.

The budgeting and financing of the Antique Automobile Club of America has many similarities with the individual families that comprise our membership. We must also make every attempt to not allow our expenditures to exceed our income.

The administration of the Antique Automobile Club of America consists of 12 offices, each chaired by a vice president appointed by the national president. You are familiar with most of them because of your contact at one time or another with one or more of them: Publications, Membership, Regions, National Activities, Class Judging, National Awards, National Headquarters, Library, Senior Car Awards, Technical Matters and Public Relations. There is one other office and department that you have little contact with and hear very little about. That one is Budget and Finance.

You are aware of the budget and finance process every few years when you are notified that your AACA dues are going to increase, but just what goes on behind the scene to make everything happen financially in this organization? Perhaps this overview will give you a better understanding of what happens to your dues and how much effort is put forth to keep from raising them.

The vice president for Budget and Finance is a member of the AACA National Board of Directors, appointed by the national president each year.

His areas of responsibility include presiding over the Finance Committee, working in concert with the AACA executive director in establishing the annual budget, co-signing all checks that are in excess of $2,000, monitoring insurance requirements and depositories for club funds and general overseeing the financial operation of the organization.

Unlike the federal government which has the ability to print more money if expenditures exceed income, the fiscal policy of AACA is to very carefully and diligently budget within our means. In the budgeting process, a varying amount is included as a contingency reserve to cover inevitable unforeseen expenditures.

Income comes from many sources. Dues, merchandise sales, interest income, contributions, magazine advertising, magazine sales and income from national meets and tours.

Expenditures also go in many directions. Publishing costs of Antique Automobile magazine, administration expenses of our executive director and staff, expenses of meets and tours including supplies and trophies, library dues assessments, National Headquarters expenses and national officer expenses.

Many long hours are spent during the year by our executive director and his staff assembling all these items in as accurate a manner as possible. Budget input comes from the other 11 administrative departments. It is then assembled in the form of a financial statement and forwarded to the vice president of budget and finance for review. Once reviewed and revised if necessary, it is presented to the board of directors at each board meeting for review and approval. Constant review takes place to assure that expenditures do not exceed budget amounts.

Formulating a budget is not an exact science and much guesswork based on past performance takes place. The fiscal policy of AACA is to keep expenditures well within the bounds of income with adequate contingency to assure no deficits at the end of the year.

Your board of directors will continue to practice the conservative philosophy, doing everything possible to keep the dues of the Antique Automobile Club of America the lowest of any major automobile organization in existence.

So please continue to include AACA in your budget and your board of directors and the department of Budget and Finance will see to it that you receive full value in return.
